162 MET DEATH LAST

Single Copy—FIVE CENTS

With 25 people killed in traffic accidents last month, Maine has experienced its highest December death record. This figure was the result of 24 accidents, only one of which killed more than one person. From an accident prevention standpoint, the number of fatal accidents is of more concern than the actual total killed because of the potentialities of an even greater loss of human life. Judged by this standard December was the most dangerous months of the year.

The causes attributed to these fatal accidents are as follows: 7 killed by speeding, 5 killed by reckless driving, 4 killed by drinking drivers, 2 killed by railroad trains, 6 killed by improper pedestrian action, and 1 killed as the result of

If Pays To Discover Your Faults

HERE IS A YOUNG WOMAN who could take it when a friend told her of a fault. More than that, she benefited by it. She is Mrs. Roberta Renner, Cincinnati, O.

She came from a large family, five boys and five girls. It was a hospitable family, and with so many boys and girls, each having individual friends, the house was filled with company most

That was all very well for the boys, and for the girls too little to bear the brunt of company. But Roberta was of the dishwashing agel And friends were made just as welcome at meal-time as at any other hour.

When Roberta saw friends arriving Carnegle just before luncheoa or dinner, resentment would swell within her. The dishes piled up high enough when only their family was present. And to have to wash dishes not only for her friends, but for the friends of all those brothers and sisters, was enough to wear down anyone's energy. She began to dislike people, Friends to her were just people to wash dishes for.

Naturally, her resentment began to show itself in even her greetings. She dropped her old friendly manner, and at best took on only a casual attitude. The hordes of people—hordes to her who came there were not welcome so far as she was concernedand she wouldn't pretend that they were. So she shunned them whenever she could.

Then one day a friend who was really a friend told her that no one liked her. That was a blow! She didn't like people, but she had not thought of people not liking her. There was a

Her friend's remarks stuck in her mind. She was troubled; she didnt want to be disliked. She decided to see what she could do to change the situation. She made friendly remarks, and she smiled. Although some seemed a little surprised at her sudden change in her approach. they also seemed pleased. By and by, she was taking a real interest in the joys and sorrows of these erstwhile

Then came the time when she was faced with a long period of inactivity, when she might have been very lonely except for the friendly attentions of her friends and neighbors.

Yes, Roberta Renner says she is grateful to the friend who told her of her fault, who informed her of a bitter truth.

THERE'S A LOT OF GOSSIP going the rounds which this colbelieve that President Truman and his administration are going to allow our men to be shoved out of Korea before he turns Chiang Kal-Shek loose on Red China's flank. It doesn't believe Mr. Truman intends to keep a huge force in Japan to protect it from the Chinese Reds when the Japanese can do that job themselves it per-mitted to arm, It doesn't believe that Mr. Truman is going to allow our allies and our own men to be pushed into the North Sea when they can save themselves—and Europe eventually-if Spain is armed and the Pyrenees mountains fortified. It doesn't believe he is going to retain Mr. Acheson in office if that fact is going to weakn confidence in the leadership. It won't bolieve, after all these years of warning, that he has allowed us to run short of aluminum, cotton, copper, tin, rubber and the other essentials for carrying on modern warfare. This column believes that

President Truman is a true patriot who is now doing his best. It cannot put him in quite the same class with Benjamin Franklin, Talleyrand or Disracil, but it believes him capable of sufficient hidnesty and brains to forget all about political consequences and act solely for the sake of his coun-

The western world is in grave danger and we believe the shortsightedness of the "New Deal" has been responsible. But we also believe that our present danger can be overcome if Mr. Truman will cast aside the old cloak and win the confidence of the world.

And finally we consider it insane to believe that all the Mongols, Slavs, Taters and Chinese in Asia and Eurasia can conquer the occidental world. They have tried it three times before and failed and they will fail again unless our leaders are worthless.

They know miniature cars about the baby's need for toys to feel, watch and chew on as he learns about the material world about him. They know, too, about the toddler's need for toys to test his new skills—push and pull toys to help him gain confidence in walking, a little chair of his own to show off the involved business of sliting down in a chosen spot inslead of just flopping. But as the child approaches three or four and is undenlably an individual, you have to put a lot of thought into what your particular Jimmy or Julia will benefit by, as well as enjoy.

If four-year-old Jimmy, for example, is quiet and a bit aluggish about exercise, now In the Ideal time to have Stanta Claus introduce enidoor play equipment—a swing, a tectertotter and especially a bit of climbing apparatus. An easel and painis will be a more natural form of amusement for the little introvert and would wisely balance the gifts meant to attr him into more activity.
